Michael Jordan Signed 1982 NCAA Championship Shot Photo

It was a shot that will continue to be remembered for years to come. On the night of March 29, 1982, University of North Carolina freshman Michael Jordan hit the game-winning basket in the NCAA Championship Game against Georgetown to give the Tar Heels the national title. The shot came with just 17 seconds left in the game and gave UNC a 63-62 victory. Upper Deck has captured that glorious moment with this 16" x 20" framed black-and-white photo. The item measures 24" wide x 20" tall.

Michael Jordan
Autographed
8x10 Color Photo-
'82 Title-Winner

Michael was a rather inexperienced player with raw skills when he began his freshman season at the University of North Carolina in 1981, but only a few months later, he suddenly became the player that won it all for the Tar Heels. Now you can remember Jordan's momentous jumper against Georgetown in the 1982 NCAA Championship Game with this autographed 8x10 color photograph of M.J. rising to the occasion for North Carolina.

Michael Jordan
Autographed
Basketball

You may know all about his famous game-winner at the 1982 NCAA Championship Game, but did you know that Michael converted an amazing 54 percent of his field goal attempts as a Tar Heel? What's more, M.J. improved his shooting in each of his two seasons after his freshman year, which showed Jordan's desire to improve his game was in effect long before his NBA career. This Wilson synthetic leather basketball, autographed by M.J., is a sure shot for any Jordan fan.

Michael Jordan
Autographed
North Carolina
Jersey (White)

On March 29, 1982, the North Carolina Tar Heels were engaged in a tough duel with Georgetown for the NCAA Championship. A 19-year-old freshman named Michael Jordan eventually provided the winning margin for the Tar Heels as he sank a jump shot in the game's closing moments. Relive UNC's great finish with this Michael Jordan-autographed University of North Carolina No. 23 (White) jersey, the same type of jersey worn by M.J. in the '82 final!
